Write a description of an older person.

He walked into the bar and said his name was Gary. His face was ancient like the ink on a Van Gogh. It was old and used like a crumpled crisp packet. He orders two whiskeys on the rocks with ice. His beard and eyebrows wild like a jungle bush, half-grey beard suggesting past traumas and mishaps. He does not flinch while guzzling down the vile liquid. His wrinkles drove around his face like rush-hour traffic as he called the barman for a refill. His eyes were queuing for the bus to go somewhere, when he was distracted by the outside world. His tired tirelessness features appeared with wisdom as he looked down his long straight nose passed his grey shaggy beard – he noticed his drink wasn't finished.
